Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1 - 21 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1 – 5, 7 – 12, 14, 15, and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Okamoto (US 4,886,291).

Regarding claims 1, 3 – 5, 7 - 12, 14, 15, and 17, Okamoto teaches operating a roll stability control system for an automotive vehicle (figs. 1, 2, and 15) – the vehicle having a front and a rear brake system and a front and a rear active anti-roll bar system (figs. 1-2; note items connected to circuits 16; summary; col. 2, lines 13 – 33; col. 15, line 66 – col. 16, line 15 at least) - comprising: an active anti-roll bar system (300 in fig. 15; col. 3, lines 13 - 16; col. 13, line 45 – col. 14, line 27); a rollover sensing system generating a roll attitude signal indicative of an impending rollover of the vehicle (col. 4, lines 4 – 18 at least); and a controller (100) coupled to the active anti-roll bar system and the rollover sensing system, said controller controlling the active anti-roll bar to prevent the vehicle from rolling over in response to the roll attitude signal being between a first and a second threshold and controlling the brake system (by way of item 106) to reduce a rolling moment of the vehicle based on tire force vector (col. 3, lines 54 – col. 4, line 18 at least).

Regarding claim 2, Okamoto further teaches controlling the active anti-roll bar system and the brake actuator to prevent the vehicle from rolling over (col. 4, lines 19 – 24 at least).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6, 13, 16, are 18 – 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Okamoto ('291) in view of Mattson et al. (US 2004/0167701 A1).

Okamoto teaches all of the limitations of the above claims except for a lateral acceleration sensor, a yaw rate sensor, determining a wheel lifted condition indicative of a lifted wheel, a traction control system, and sequential/simultaneous control of the bar and brake actuators.

However, Mattson et al. teaches, in the same field of endeavor of roll stability system for a vehicle (10), a lateral acceleration sensor, a yaw rate sensor, determining a wheel lifted condition indicative of a lifted wheel, a traction control system (see fig. 1; ¶¶ 0003, 0008 – 0010, 0012, 0028, 0029, 0032, and 0034 at least) and sequential and simultaneous operation of the control system (¶0043 at least).

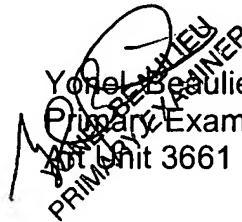

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have modified Okamoto's teaching by including a lateral acceleration sensor, a yaw rate sensor, determining a wheel lifted condition indicative of a lifted wheel, a traction control system and sequential/simultaneous operation of the control system as evidenced by Mattson et al. in order to increase reliability of the system.
